

Graduate Traineeship Market Research/Social Research

What is it?

The Australian Market & Social Research Society (AMSRS) in Victoria is offering a limited number of Melbourne-based research traineeships to suitably qualified and motivated candidates.

Applications are being sought now for traineeships commencing in January 2010, and running for 10-12 months. The traineeships are open to recently qualified, enthusiastic, university graduates with a desire to commence a career in the research industry – in market research and/or social research.

Successful applicants will be offered a position with a leading employer in Melbourne, either a specialist research organisation or a research department within a major employer, and will be provided with on the job training in all key aspects of research.

One of the benefits to trainees is attendance at AMSRS training courses in 2010 to complement the in-house training that the employer will provide.

At the conclusion of the traineeship, you will be free to seek employment opportunities within the industry or like most Trainees in the past, remain with the employer you have been placed with.

How to apply

Applications close on October 29th 2009. The application form is available from AMSRS on www.amsrs.com.au

A document explaining more about the Traineeship Programme is also available on the website at www.amsrs.com.au

All applicants must be Australian citizens or have permanent residency status.

If you believe you have what it takes and feel that you are a suitable candidate for this traineeship programme, please send your completed application form with relevant supporting information to:
